nursing research be included in the mainstream of biomedical and behavioral science;

Nursing Research within the National Institutes of Health to disseminate information related to basic and clinical nursing research through the passage of the Health Research Extension Act of 1985;

Whereas the National Center for Nursing Research excelled in its purpose to support and provide research training, fellowships, and opportunities for our Nation's nursing scientists;

Whereas the Congress, recognizing the contributions of the National Center for Nursing Research to improving quality care and health, redesignated the center the National Institute of Nursing Research (in this resolution referred to as the “NINR”) through the passage of the National Institutes of Health Revitalization Act of 1993;

Whereas the NINR’s research focus for the past 30 years encompasses advances in health and wellness promotion, managing symptoms of acute and chronic illnesses, as well as innovations in science and practice;

Whereas the NINR’s mission is to promote and improve the health of individuals, families, communities, and populations, across all stages of life;

Whereas the NINR’s goal is to enhance nursing science and health care by integrating the biological and behavioral sciences, applying new technologies, promoting health equity, and developing scientists of the future;

Whereas NINR funded scientists conduct patient-centered, point-of-care, biobehavioral research with a primary focus on health promotion, symptom management, quality of care, and quality of life;

Whereas the NINR has a commitment to helping eliminate health disparities facing minority, underserved, and disadvantaged populations across the Nation;

Whereas the NINR is the lead institute for palliative and end-of-life care research at the National Institutes of Health; and

Whereas the NINR invests a large portion of its budget to train emerging scientists, ensuring a strong body of nursing knowledge is generated for the health of the Nation:
